2021: Time for a New Verse

Rabbi David Stern

The turning of the secular year is always a time for reflection. For us as Jews, it's a sort of second Rosh Hashanah: an opportunity to assess where we are on the landscape of our life's journey — our hearts and spirits, the relationships most precious and challenging to us, our struggles and successes in God's world. The Torah bonus of this season is that it also coincides with the beginning of the Book of Exodus, and with it the Exodus 3 episode of Moses at the burning bush. Moses, shepherding in the wilderness, comes upon an ordinary bush aflame with summons and possibility.

In that spirit, I'd like to share a few poems that I turn to to remind me of the invitation to revelation in our daily lives. Reminders that insight is available to us not only at the official times — the High Holy Days, Shabbat, a meditation retreat or the turn of the year — but in every moment. So as a new year's present, here are three poems of illumination in the commonplace: from a ringing summons to our own potential, to the sweetness in a child's eyes and a worrying parent's heart, to the sacred gift of opportunity in each day. May this year of 2021 and the Torah that guides us hold revelations for us all.

Variation on a Theme by Rilke

by Denise Levertov

A certain day became a presence to me;
there it was, confronting me — a sky, air, light:
a being. And before it started to descend from the height of noon, it leaned over and struck my shoulder as if with the flat of a sword, granting me honor and a task. The day's blow rang out, metallic — or was it I, a bell awakened, and what I heard was my whole self saying and singing what it knew: I can.

Eyes

by Yehuda Amichai

My oldest son's eyes are like black figs
For he was born at the end of summer.

And my youngest son's eyes are clear
Like orange slices, for he was born in their season.

And the eyes of my little daughter are round
Like the first grapes.

And all are sweet in my worry.

And the eyes of the Lord roam the earth
And my eyes are always looking round my house.

God's in the eye business and the fruit business
I'm in the worry business.

You Reading This, Be Ready

by William Stafford

Starting here, what do you want to remember?
How sunlight creeps along a shining floor?
What scent of old wood hovers, what softened sound from outside fills the air?

Will you ever bring a better gift for the world than the breathing respect that you carry wherever you go right now? Are you waiting for time to show you some better thoughts?

When you turn around, starting here, lift this new glimpse that you found; carry into evening all that you want from this day. This interval you spent reading or hearing this, keep it for life —

What can anyone give you greater than now,
Starting here, right in this room, when you turn around?

Becoming an Antiracist Congregation

Temple Emanu-El continues its work in eliminating racism and promoting awareness and education throughout our congregation, our city and our world. We are sharing terms we'll be studying in our Facing Our Truths small groups, as well as framing questions for the topics.

IMPLICIT BIAS: Subconscious attitudes, perceptions and stereotypes that influence our understanding, actions, and behavior when interacting with various identities. Implicit bias lies below the surface, but may influence our behaviors.

What are some examples of how implicit bias manifests itself in life?

When is a time you've encountered your own implicit bias?

What are some ways we can interrupt our bias as a daily practice?

EXPLICIT BIAS	IMPLICIT BIAS
Expressed directly	Expressed indirectly
Aware of bias, operates consciously	Unaware of bias, operates sub-consciously
Example: Sign in the window of an apartment building: "We don't rent to _____."	Example: A property manager doing more criminal background checks on African Americans than whites.

GRIEF SUPPORT

Tuesdays, Jan. 12 and 26, 11:30AM-1PM, via Zoom
 Contact Meredith Pryzant at mpryzant@tedallas.org for more information about group and/or Zoom link.

PANDEMIC-RELATED ONGOING SUPPORT

Over the summer, Jewish Family Service hosted three learning and support opportunities for Temple members related to coping strategies for uncertain times. We are grateful that JFS continues to provide ongoing opportunities for group support on this topic. Specific information about the groups can be found at tedallas.org/community/mental-health-resources.

LET US KNOW

Temple clergy and staff are available to support members of our community dealing with mental and physical health issues. Please reach out to us if you or a friend or family member is dealing with COVID-19, depression, addiction, grief, cancer, chronic conditions, infertility, mobility issues, housing transition, job loss or other conditions.

NO BARRIERS

Finances should never be a barrier to participation in Temple life. Confidential financial assistance is available for most Temple events, tuition and dues.

To join our community in caring or let us know if you are in need of help, please contact Meredith Pryzant, Director of Member Support, at mpryzant@tedallas.org or 214.706.0000 ext. 122.

Never Alone

We are shining the light on well-being, and erasing the stigma surrounding mental health

Despite all the secular buzz about fresh starts, resolutions and clean slates, sometimes darkness comes. Shorter days, life's curveballs and when-will-it-be-over years such as 2020 can throw off our balance.

The participants of the Mental Well-Being Working Group are Lori Gerard, Alyson L. Ray, Amy G. Roseman, Teresa Rosenfield, Phyllis Stoup and Fran Toubin, overseen by Vice President Scott Rosuck. Staff members are Rabbi Amy Ross and Meredith Pryzant. The work is ongoing to illuminate resources that are available to you in tough times. Through their expertise in the field, their Temple involvement over the years and their own experiences of how Temple comes through, they share their compassion and help shine the light on a brighter tomorrow.

Note: Temple involvement includes a range of past service and current roles.

You all have given to Temple in so many ways over the years. Why is this work so meaningful to you now?

AGR: Knowing my family's history and my husband's family history of mental health struggles, mental wellness is something that we spoke of often with our boys (now in college), just as we talked about asthma and a family history of heart disease. When my oldest son's dearest friend from Greene Family Camp died suddenly and accidentally at the age of 16, he turned to a Temple rabbi to help him get through the myriad of unanswerable questions. Earlier this year, a dear family friend, our youngest son's best friend, died by suicide. The urgency to Shine the Light on mental well-being became paramount once again. Sadly, we can provide purpose through our pain.

PS: Upon retirement 10 years ago, I wanted to get involved at Temple in a meaningful way...I brought some possibilities to Temple, and voila...the birth of Sukkat Shalom (Temple's mental well-being initiative)! Mental well-being is the nugget at the base of every program planned for congregants by this group.

FT: Although I've enjoyed all my Temple involvement, being part of the mental health & well-being initiative feels like a sacred obligation and a personal, heartfelt commitment to our community.

Why is it important for Temple to focus on mental well-being this season?

LG: Unfortunately, there is a stigma associated with mental illness. The work that Temple will do in promoting mental well-being reminds us all that we are there for one another and not struggling alone. Just talking about it enables and encourages those dealing with mental illness, or even those experiencing unhappiness or depression, to reach out to others for help.

AGR: We are in a mental health crisis in the U.S. According to the CDC, the annual U.S. suicide rate increased 24 percent between 1999 and 2014, from 10.5 to 13.0 suicides per 100,000 people, the highest rate recorded in 28 years. The Temple community is not immune and together, we can get through this and can help one another at this dire time.

ALR: The pandemic has caused everyone to isolate and isolation is tough for anyone, for those with mental health issues and those who have not had the issues before.

Psalms for a Pandemic

Thursdays in January
9-9:45AM on Zoom

Brighten your winter mornings with the ancient, enduring words of the Psalms in this new online class with Rabbi Debra Robbins. Experience for yourself the power of these words that have brought solace, personal insights and communal connection to our people for thousands of years. Join us weekly or drop in when you can; no Hebrew knowledge is necessary. The experience will include varied translations, music, heart opening questions, a writing practice, shared silence and small group conversation.

January 7: Psalm 81 for Thursdays

January 14: Psalm 121 for Lifting our Sights

January 21: Psalm 133 for Coming Together

January 28: Psalm 1 for Tu BiSh'vat

Watch The Weekly email for Zoom links.

*Questions? Contact Rachel Tucker at

One of our goals of Shine the Light is to remove the stigma associated with talking about mental well-being openly and honestly. What would you say to someone who was afraid to reach out to TE for help?

AGR: When dealing with a mental health challenge, we can feel isolated and overwhelmed, you are NOT alone. Let your support network in to help, share experiences and trusted resources: Temple staff and lay leaders have walked this path with other families and can help you. You are NOT alone.

ALR: Please don't worry about judgment from others; a lot of people are suffering in silence, and that is so sad. You may not know what help you need, talking to someone with experience can lead you to a program that would be helpful to you or your family.

PS: When life throws us curves as it did for [husband] Phil and me, losing both of our mothers just 12 weeks apart, I had to find a way to move forward. My wonderful friend who had just lost her husband asked me to join her in participating in a grief support group at Temple. It was such a healing experience and helped me in a very positive way. Hearing others tell their stories made my journey easier, and it no longer felt unique.

FT: When these challenges impacted my own family several years ago, I turned to our clergy. I felt comfortable confiding in them, knowing and being reassured our discussions would be kept confidential. One conversation led to many, and I can't stress what a difference they have made, from providing emotional and spiritual support, to connecting me with other families facing similar difficulties (with their permission, of course), to helping me truly understand that our family is not alone and how asking for help is a sign of strength, not weakness. Our rabbis and cantors are incredible, and my family and I continue to be grateful for their compassion and guidance.

What are the ways that you depend on Temple for your own positive mental well-being?

ALR: Using self-help practices such as Mussar, meditation and yoga.

How has Temple been a source of comfort during the pandemic?

LG: Temple has helped keep our sense of community intact, despite the physical barriers posed by the pandemic. Knowing that our clergy and professional staff are working hard to keep the spiritual flame "lit" during this pandemic has been a great source of relief to me as I'm sure it has for the rest of the Temple community.

TOP FIVE

Here are five ideas from Temple to boost your mental well-being.

1

Take the Psalms for a Pandemic class taught by Rabbi Debra Robbins on Thursday mornings this month. See previous page.

2

Attend a Shabbat service on Friday night or Saturday morning, or attend the Daily Minyan on Sunday-Friday. Hear your favorite music and connect with other Temple members in breakout rooms or at a virtual oneg. Zoom links are provided in the Thursday edition of The Weekly.

3

Stretch and move at your own pace under the expert guidance of Debbi K. Levy in Yoga Through a Jewish Lens. See page 5.

4

Find solace and community in JFS-facilitated grief support. See page 4.

TEMPLE EMANU-EL ANNUAL FUND

Spotlight on Paige and Marc Sachs

The Annual Fund is the highest fund-raising priority at Temple. The funds raised help make Temple the vibrant place that it is, and provide resources for unwavering help and support for you and your loved ones. As Temple looks ahead to its 150th anniversary, we take time to share stories with you of today's Annual Fund leaders who are helping to assure a strong tomorrow.

Paige and Marc Sachs, 2020-2021 Co-Chairs

Tell us about your connection to Temple.

We have been members since the moment we moved to Dallas in 2008. We knew many friends that were already members and so happy with their experience. Since then we have been involved with Youth Learning + Engagement, the Annual Fund and the Board of Trustees.

Is there an experience over the past few months that Temple made more meaningful?

Temple continues to make many differences in our lives whether it is a baby naming, a mitzvah or continuing education. Most recently, it would have to be the virtual services during the High Holy Days. Leading up to it, we weren't sure how it would work or feel. In the end, it was as impactful and meaningful as it has ever been. We really enjoyed it.

Thank you for your leadership in the Annual Fund. We're so happy you accepted the role!

We said "yes" to the Annual Fund because we truly believe in Temple and its impact on not only our lives, but the entire community. Being involved has allowed us to do a deep dive into just how significant Temple's programs and outreach can be.

A Fashionable Mark on Dallas
*Second in a series on luminary
 Dallas retailers and their
 Temple Emanu-El connections*

Herbert Marcus, Sr., his sister Carrie Marcus, and her husband A.L. Neiman, founded Neiman Marcus in 1907. All were Temple Emanu-El members. They had built a successful sales promotion firm and had two investors and thus had $25,000 to invest into a business. Instead of taking a chance on an unknown “sugary soda pop business,” they elected to create a retail business. That soda pop business they passed on was Coca-Cola.

The first store opened on September 10, 1907. It was stocked with inventory from New York, most of which was not commonly found in Texas. They sold out within a few weeks.

A fire in 1914 destroyed the original Neiman Marcus store and all of its inventory. Neiman Marcus opened its now famous flagship store on Main and Eavy at the end of 1914.
